

“There's a Difference—I Own This”: Negotiating Social and Financial Services under Threat of Mortgage Foreclosure

Get access >

Social Work, Volume 61, Issue 4, October 2016, Pages 321–330,

<https://doi.org/10.1093/sw/sww049>

Published: 23 September 2016 Article history ▼

Abstract

Although national housing markets have recovered from the Great Recession, communities hardest hit by the foreclosure crisis remain immersed in mortgage trouble. Nineteen percent of homeowners are underwater on their mortgages and communities of color are overrepresented among zip codes still experiencing default in rising numbers. The social services needs of homeowners at risk of foreclosure show few signs of abating. High levels of market risk, asymmetrical power relationships, and the assumption that rational action can protect homeowners mark the climate in which households and social workers operate while attempting to halt foreclosure. The research described in this article draws on in-depth interviews conducted with homeowners at risk of default to examine the strategies they used to alleviate their mortgage strain. These strategies included seeking aid from financial and social services institutions while living under threat of default. As homeowners experienced mortgage strain they engaged in recommended rational market actions such as negotiating with lenders, increasing work hours, practicing strict household budgeting, and seeking aid from social work agencies to offset mortgage costs. The gathered data suggest that some social workers responded with poorly contextualized treatment plans and language characterized by disrespect, shame, and blame; others responded with mental health assistance, referrals to legal aid, and a helping relationship characterized by a sense of mattering that seemed to buffer against the psychosocial stressors associated with foreclosure.

Sign in

 Get help with access

National Association of Social Workers members

Sign in through society site >

NASW PRESS

Personal account

- Sign in with email/username & password
- Get email alerts
- Save searches
- Purchase content
- Activate your purchase/trial code
- Add your ORCID iD

Sign in >

Register

Institutional access

Sign in through your institution >

Sign in with a library card

Sign in with username/password

Recommend to your librarian

Institutional account management

Sign in as administrator

Purchase

Subscription prices and ordering for this journal

Purchasing options for books and journals across Oxford Academic

Short-term Access

To purchase short-term access, please sign in to your personal account above.

Don't already have a personal account? Register

“There's a Difference—I Own This”: Negotiating Social and Financial Services under Threat of Mortgage Foreclosure - 24 Hours access

EUR €38.00

GBP £33.00

USD $41.00

Oxford University Press uses cookies to enhance your experience on our website. By selecting 'accept' you are agreeing to our use of cookies. You can change your cookie settings at any time. More information can be found in our Cookie Policy.

This article is also available for rental through DeepDyve.