In December 2017, the US Food and Drug Administration approved voretigene neparvovec-rzyl (Luxturna), a one-time genetic treatment manufactured by Spark Therapeutics that must be injected into the eye and can improve the vision of individuals with biallelic RPE65 mutation-associated retinal dystrophy, a rare genetic condition that affects approximately 1000 to 2000 people in the United States each year. The therapy was priced $850 000 per treatment, just below the million dollar threshold some had anticipated.
