

Impact Factor: 0.7

5-Year Impact Factor:

By clicking "Accept Non-Essential Cookies", you agree to the storing of cookies on your device to enhance site navigation, analyze site usage, and assist in our marketing efforts. Privacy Policy Cookie Policy

Manage Cookies

Accept Non-Essential Cookies

Reject Non-Essential Cookies

Contents

More

Abstract

This article analyses... point of view – was the most impor... w that, in contrast to the conventional... exploiting occupied
France – not in the... ard occupation funds. Although the war in the East and preparations for the invasion made it necessary for Germany to reduce wasteful spending of occupation funds and combat French inflation more consistently, its occupation policy did not shift radically but gradually between mid 1942 and the end of 1943. However, it was not Albert Speer's Armament Ministry, but other German institutions, especially the Reich Finance Ministry, which played a decisive role in this process. Without this policy Germany would not have been able to increase the French contribution to the German warfare all over Europe, especially on the Eastern front.

Get full access to this article

View all access and purchase options for this article.

Get Access

Marcel Boldorf is a researcher at the Ruhr-university in Bochum. Previously, he has studied modern history, social and economic history, and comparative literature at the University of Saarland, followed by a doctoral degree in social and economic history at the University of Mannheim. From 1992–2004 he was academic assistant at the economic faculty of the University of Mannheim and between 2007–10 held appointments in Saarbrücken, Darmstadt, Munich, Berlin and Frankfurt (Oder). His main publications are Europäische Leinenregionen im Wandel. Institutionelle Weichenstellungen in Schlesien und Irland 1750–1850 (Cologne 2006); Sozialfürsorge in der SBZ/DDR 1945–1953. Ursachen, Ausmaß und Bewältigung der Nachkriegsarmut (Stuttgart 1998). His research interests include the industrialisation of European regions, the social and economic history of Vichy France, and the change in European economic elites after 1945 (with a focus on East Germany).

Jonas Scherner is Associate Professor in Modern European Economic History at NTNU Trondheim, Norway. Previously he studied economics and history in Mannheim and Parma, including a doctoral degree in economic history in Mannheim. His main publications include Die Logik der Industriepolitik im Dritten Reich. Die Investitionen in die Autarkie- und Rüstungsindustrie und ihre staatliche Förderung (Stuttgart 2008); Eliten und wirtschaftliche Entwicklung: Kongreßpolen und Spanien im 19. Jahrhundert (Münster 2001). His main research interests include the exploitation of occupied Europe during Nazi rule, the causes of productivity growth of German armament producers during the Second World War, and German historical statistics in the interwar period.

Similar articles:

Restricted access

The Individual Soldier and the Occupation

Show Details ▾

Restricted access

The Meeting of the Staatssekretäre on 2 May 1941 and the Wehrmacht: A Document up for Discussion

Show Details ▾

Restricted access

Germans, Ukrainians and Jews: Ethnic Politics in Heeresgebiet Süd June-December 1941

Show Details ▾

View More

Sage recommends:

CQ Researcher

Report

Consumer Debt

Show Details ▾

SAGE Knowledge

Book chapter

February

Show Details

SAGE Research Methods

Book chapter

Money Matters: Contracts, Funding Projects and Paying Participants

Show Details

View More

You currently have no access to this content. Visit the access options page to authenticate.

View full text | Download PDF

Also from Sage

CQ Library

Elevating debate

Sage Data

Uncovering insight

Sage Business Cases

Shaping futures

Sage Campus

Unleashing potential

Sage Knowledge

Multimedia learning resources

Sage Research Methods

Supercharging research

Sage Video

Streaming knowledge

Technology from Sage

Library digital services

