Biographies

Marc Cowling is a Professor of Entrepreneurship at Brighton Business School and Director of Research, where he leads a group of academics involved in teaching and researching aspects of entrepreneurial business processes and performance. Currently his research focuses on the impact of the global financial crisis on the financing and performance of smaller firms, particularly on how experienced and inexperienced entrepreneurs differ in their ability to access finance and subsequent business outcomes. Prior to his appointment at Brighton he was Head of Management Studies at Exeter Business School.

Weixi Liu is a Lecturer in Finance at the School of Management, University of Bath. His research interests include entrepreneurship, the finance of entrepreneurial firms, especially high-tech young firms, venture capital and government policy on entrepreneurship and entrepreneurial finance. He has been commissioned by both national governments and international institutions to conduct policy-focused research on entrepreneurship and small business policies.

Andrew Ledger is a Statistician at the UK Department for Business Innovation and Skills, working in enterprise and economic development analysis. He has a wide range of responsibilities around enterprise analysis and policy, and provides statistical support to a number of projects, including the Department's Small Business Survey and Business Barometer series.

Ning Zhang is a Lecturer in Accounting and Finance at the International Business School Suzhou, Xi'an Jiaotong – Liverpool University. Her research interests include small business finance and performance appraisal, international entrepreneurship and foreign direct investment in developing countries. As an external consultant, she has interacted with local governments and business communities in shaping policies to promote regional economic development, especially with respect to innovation and entrepreneurship.
