Abstract

Museums keep a substantial share of their holdings hidden in storage rooms. Why is that so, and what can be done to overcome this situation? New possibilities can only be suggested in a useful way after having analyzed why the situation is as it is.

This chapter is based on Bruno S. Frey (1994), "Cultural Economics and Museum Behaviour", previously published in the Scottish Journal of Political Economy 41 (3), pp. 325–335, used by permission of Blackwell Publishers.

4 Museums then have a mixed form of governance incorporating both public and private governing authorities. Such "hybridization" is under way both in the United States and Europe (see Schuster 1998 and, for the aspect of communication, Rutter 1998a).
