

“As Members of the Social Whole”: A History of Social Reform as a Focus of Home Economics, 1895–1940

Rima D. Apple, Joyce Coleman

First published: 02 July 2009

<https://doi.org/10.1177/1077727X03032002002>

Abstract

This article studies the critical purpose of home economics postsecondary education as preparation for social reform, focusing on the role that founders expected homemakers to play in ameliorating social problems. For them, the goal of home economics was a better world. The means to this improved society was scientific knowledge applied to the family and the community by home economists and home economics-trained homemakers. Yet, by the 1920s, it was clear that the social responsibility of homemakers, as envisioned by the first leaders of the discipline, had virtually disappeared from the rhetoric of home economics. Although no one factor explains the silencing of calls for civic involvement on the part of homemakers, factors external of the discipline, including federal legislation and directed appropriations, developing education theories, growing emphasis on professional specialization, increased employment opportunities for women, and a redefinition of women's familial role served to redirect the focus of the field.

REFERENCES

Alderman, K. M. (1948). Expressing our philosophy. Journal of Home Economics, 40, 1–2.

Google Scholar

Anderson, C. L., & Nickols, S. Y. (2001). The essence of our being: A synopsis of the 2001 commemorative lecture. Journal of Family & Consumer Sciences, 9(5), 15–18.

This website utilizes technologies such as cookies to enable essential site functionality, as well as for analytics, personalization, and targeted advertising. You may change your settings at any time or accept the default settings. You may close this banner to continue with only essential cookies. Privacy Policy

Manage Preferences

Accept All

Reject Non-Essential

Apple, R. D. (1995). Constructing mothers: Scientific motherhood in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. Social History of Medicine, 8, 161–178.

CAS | PubMed | Web of Science® | Google Scholar

Apple, R. D. (1997). Liberal arts or vocational training: Home economics education for girls. In S. Stage & V. B. Vincenti (Eds.), Rethinking home economics (pp. 79–95). Ithaca, NY: Cornell University Press.

Google Scholar

Berlage, N. (1998). The establishment of an applied social science: Home economists, science, and reform at Cornell, 1870–1930. In H. Silverberg (Ed.), Gender and American social science: The formative years (pp. 185–231). Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press.

Google Scholar

Blair, K. J. (1980). The clubwoman as feminist: True womanhood redefined, 1868–1914. New York: Holmes & Meier.

Google Scholar

Bomar, W. M. (1929). Social aspects of homemaking. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott.

Google Scholar

Bomar, W. M. (1931a). An introduction to homemaking and its relation to the community. Philadelphia: W. B. Saunders.

Google Scholar

Bomar, W. M. (1931b). The education of homemakers for community activities: A study of the community interests and activities of representative homemakers to discover certain needs for home economics education. New York: Columbia University, Teachers College.

Google Scholar

This website utilizes technologies such as cookies to enable essential site functionality, as well as for analytics, personalization, and targeted advertising. You may change your settings at any time or accept the default settings. You may close this banner to continue with only essential cookies. Privacy Policy

Manage Preferences

Accept All

Reject Non-Essential

Charters, W. W. (1926). The traits of home makers. Journal of Home Economics, 18, 673–685.

 Google Scholar

Cheek, W. K., & Moore, C. E. (2003). Apparel sweatshops at home and abroad: Global and ethical issues. Journal of Family & Consumer Sciences, 95, 9–19.

 Google Scholar

Civic engagement. (2002). Journal of Family & Consumer Sciences, 94(3).

 Google Scholar

Cole, J. M., & Desmond, H. J. (1905). Biennial report of the Regents of the University for the years 1904–05 and 1905–06. Madison, WI: University of Wisconsin.

 Google Scholar

Cooley, A. M., Winchell, C. M., Spohr, W. H., & Marshall, J. A. (1919). Teaching home economics. New York: Macmillan.

 Google Scholar

M. East (Ed.). (1982). Caroline Hunt: Philosopher of home economics. University Park, PA: Pennsylvania State University, College of Education.

 Google Scholar

Fitzpatrick, E. (1990). Endless crusade: Women social scientists and progressive reform. New York: Oxford University Press.

 Google Scholar

This website utilizes technologies such as cookies to enable essential site functionality, as well as for analytics, personalization, and targeted advertising. You may change your settings at any time or accept the default settings. You may close this banner to continue with only essential cookies. Privacy Policy

Manage Preferences

Accept All

Reject Non-Essential

Google Scholar

Howe, H. R. (1934). Food and drug legislation and home economics clubs. Journal of Home Economics, 26, 559–560.

Google Scholar

Hunt, C. L. (1908). Letter to Charles VanHise, dated 22 May 1908. Located in the University of Wisconsin Archives, Series 4/10/1, Box 3, Folder: "Florence Buckstaff."

Google Scholar

Hunt, C. L. (1912). The life of Ellen H. Richards. Boston: Whitcomb & Barrows.

Google Scholar

Hunt, C. L. (1982a). Home economics at the University of Wisconsin: A housekeeper conference. In M. East (Ed.), Caroline Hunt: Philosopher for home economics (pp. 70–74). University Park, PA: Pennsylvania State University, College of Education. (Original work published 1904)

Google Scholar

Hunt, C. L. (1982b). Revaluations. In M. East (Ed.), Caroline Hunt: Philosopher for home economics (pp. 52–62). University Park, PA: Pennsylvania State University, College of Education. (Original work published 1901)

Google Scholar

Hunt, C. L. (1982c). Woman's public work for the home. In M. East (Ed.), Caroline Hunt: Philosopher for home economics (pp. 66–92). University Park, PA: Pennsylvania State University, College of Education. (Original work published 1907)

Web of Science®  Google Scholar

Kliebard, H. M. (1986). The struggle for the American curriculum, 1893–1958. Boston: Routledge.

This website utilizes technologies such as cookies to enable essential site functionality, as well as for analytics, personalization, and targeted advertising. You may change your settings at any time or accept the default settings. You may close this banner to continue with only essential cookies. Privacy Policy

Manage Preferences

Accept All

Reject Non-Essential

Ladd-Taylor, M. (1994). Mother-work: Women, child welfare, and the state, 1890–1930. Urbana: University of Illinois Press.

 | Google Scholar  |

Ladd-Taylor, M. (1997). “When the birds have flown the nest, the mother-work may still go on”: Sentimental maternalism and the National Congress of Mothers. In R. D. Apple & J. Golden (Eds.), Mothers & motherhood: Readings in American history (pp. 444–474). Columbus: The Ohio State University Press.

 | Google Scholar  |

Lehman, R. T. (1953). The home economics graduate in the community. Journal of Home Economics, 45, 713–716.

 | Google Scholar  |

Lubove, R. (1965). The professional altruist: The emergence of social work as a career, 1880–1930. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press.

 | Google Scholar  |

Macdonald, E. (1927). Homemaking: A profession for men and women. Boston: Marshall Jones.

 | Google Scholar  |

Mack, P. E. (2002). The municipal housekeeping movement and the profession of engineering. Unpublished manuscript.

 | Google Scholar  |

Marlatt, A. L. (1922). Achievements of home economics. Journal of Home Economics, 14, 5–8.

 | Google Scholar  |

This website utilizes technologies such as cookies to enable essential site functionality, as well as for analytics, personalization, and targeted advertising. You may change your settings at any time or accept the default settings. You may close this banner to continue with only essential cookies. Privacy Policy

Manage Preferences

Accept All

Reject Non-Essential

Nickell, P., & Dorsey, J. M. (1942). Management and family living. New York: John Wiley.

Google Scholar

Nerad, M. (1999). The academic kitchen: A social history of gender stratification at the University of California, Berkeley. Albany: State University of New York Press.

Google Scholar

Nickols, S. Y. (2001). Keeping the Betty Lamp burning. Journal of Family & Consumer Sciences, 93(3), 35–44.

Google Scholar

An opportunity to serve. (1948). Journal of Home Economics, 40, 32.

Google Scholar

Petrich, B., & Gross, D. (1983). Human services education: Social responsibility and helping others. Home Economics Research Journal, 11, 359–366.

Google Scholar

Popple, P., & Reid, P. N. (1999). A profession for the poor? A history of social in the United States. In G. R. Lowe & P. N. Reid (Eds.), The professional of poverty: Social work and the poor in the twentieth century (pp. 9–28). New York: Aldine de Gruyter.

Google Scholar

Pundt, H. (1980). AHEA: A history of excellence. Washington, DC: American Home Economics Association.

Google Scholar

Reynolds, M. (1916). For the homemaker: The woman of today. Journal of Home Economics, 8, 191.

This website utilizes technologies such as cookies to enable essential site functionality, as well as for analytics, personalization, and targeted advertising. You may change your settings at any time or accept the default settings. You may close this banner to continue with only essential cookies. Privacy Policy

Manage Preferences

Accept All

Reject Non-Essential

Richards, E. H. (1910). Euthenics, the science of controllable environment. Boston: Whitcomb & Barrows.

Google Scholar

Richards, E. H. (1911). The social significance of the home economics movement. Journal of Home Economics, 3, 117–125.

Google Scholar

Rossiter, M. W. (1982). Women scientists in America: Struggles and strategies to 1940. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press.

Google Scholar

Rury, J. (1988). Vocationalism for home and work: Women's education in the United States, 1880–1930. In B. E. McClellan & W. Reese (Eds.), The social history of American education (pp. 233–256). Urbana: University of Illinois Press.

Google Scholar

Smith-Hughes Act, 20 U.S.C. § 1145, 1628 (1917).

Google Scholar

Smith-Lever Act, 7 U.S.C. § 341 et seq. (1914).

Google Scholar

S. Stage, & V. B. Vincenti (Eds.). (1997). Rethinking home economics: Women and the history of a profession. Ithaca, NY: Cornell University Press.

Google Scholar

Talbot, M. (1910). The education of women. Chicago: University of Chicago Press.

This website utilizes technologies such as cookies to enable essential site functionality, as well as for analytics, personalization, and targeted advertising. You may change your settings at any time or accept the default settings. You may close this banner to continue with only essential cookies. Privacy Policy

Manage Preferences

Accept All

Reject Non-Essential

Third annual Housekeeper's Conference, University of Wisconsin, Department of Home Economics. (1908, February 4–14). Program located at the University of Wisconsin Archives, Box “Home Economics Course Catalogs.”

Google Scholar

Tomes, N. (1998). The gospel of germs: Men, women, and microbes in American life. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press.

Google Scholar

University of Wisconsin Catalog of Home Economics, 1913–1914. Located at the University of Wisconsin Archives, Series 10/0/1. Box 1.

Google Scholar

Vance, M. H. (1976). A chronological history of the development of the objectives for teaching home economics in the high schools of the United States during the 1918–1972 period. Unpublished doctoral thesis, East Texas State University: Commerce, Texas.

Google Scholar

Vincenti, V. B. (1982). Toward a clear professional identity. Journal of Home Economics, 74, 20–25.

Google Scholar

Waite, W. C. (1933). Some contributions of economics to the problems of home economics. Journal of Home Economics, 25, 567–572.

Google Scholar

Weigley, E. S. (1974). It might have been euthenics: The Lake Placid Conferences and the home economics movement. American Quarterly, 26, 76–96.

Google Scholar

This website utilizes technologies such as cookies to enable essential site functionality, as well as for analytics, personalization, and targeted advertising. You may change your settings at any time or accept the default settings. You may close this banner to continue with only essential cookies. Privacy Policy

Manage Preferences

Accept All

Reject Non-Essential

Winslow, E. A. (1920). The new visiting housekeeper: Her training and her work. Family, 1, 11–13.

Google Scholar

Women's Course in Home Economics and Demonstration School in Home Economics. (1913). Program located at the University of Wisconsin Archives, Series 10/0/1, Box 1.

Google Scholar

Zuill, F. (1932). Does home economics function in the modern home Journal of Home Economics, 24, 671–678.

Google Scholar

Zuill, F. (1934). New values in home economics. Journal of the National Education Association, 23, 119–120.

Google Scholar

Citing Literature

Download PDF

ABOUT WILEY ONLINE LIBRARY

- Privacy Policy
- Terms of Use
- About Cookies
- Manage Cookies
- Accessibility

Wiley Research DE&I Statement and Publishing Policies

This website utilizes technologies such as cookies to enable essential site functionality, as well as for analytics, personalization, and targeted advertising. You may change your settings at any time or accept the default settings. You may close this banner to continue with only essential cookies. Privacy Policy

Manage Preferences

Accept All

Reject Non-Essential

CONNECT WITH WILEY

The Wiley Network

Wiley Press Room

Copyright © 1999-2025 John Wiley & Sons, Inc or related companies. All rights reserved, including rights for text and data mining and training of artificial intelligence technologies or similar technologies.

WILEY

This website utilizes technologies such as cookies to enable essential site functionality, as well as for analytics, personalization, and targeted advertising. You may change your settings at any time or accept the default settings. You may close this banner to continue with only essential cookies. Privacy Policy

Manage Preferences

Accept All

Reject Non-Essential