RESEARCH ARTICLE | DECEMBER 01 1998

Stressful situations? The case of management buyout/buyins 😾

Yehuda Baruch; Sally Woodward

+ Author & Article Information

Management Decision (1998) 36 (10): 641-648.

https://doi.org/10.1108/00251749810245282

An investigation was undertaken into the important, yet neglected area of the people aspects of management buyout (MBO/MBI). Since prior work suggests that management is, by far, one of the most crucial factors in the success of MBOs an in-depth study focused on the characteristics of buyout managers, the culture of management buyout teams, and influences on behaviours during the transaction. This paper reports one part of the study - that relating to management buyout stressors. The aspect of the transaction that generates the most stress was found to be time pressure. Generally, however, the results suggest that stressors, identified by the literature and through focus groups, were not perceived as stressful by this group of buyout managers. Related to this, was the finding that the majority were able to cope with these stressors. Regression analysis indicated that a key factor in manager's ability to cope was the open/interactive nature of the management team culture.

Keywords: Management buy-outs, Coping, Stress

© MCB UP Limited

You do not currently have access to this content.

Sign in

Don't already have an account? Register

Client Account

Email address / Username

Access through your institution

Purchased this content as a guest? Enter your email address to restore access.
Email Address
Pay-Per-View Access €38.00
₩ Buy This Article

Rental

This article is also available for rental through DeepDyve.

