

Publications

2014 REPORT

An Economy Doing Half Its Job: Findings of Harvard Business School's 2013–14 Survey on U.S. Competitiveness

By: Michael E. Porter and Jan Rivkin

Format: Print | Language: English

Email Print Share

ABSTRACT

In 2013–14, Harvard Business School (HBS) conducted its third alumni survey on U.S. competitiveness. Our report on the findings focuses on a troubling divergence in the American economy: large and midsize firms have rallied strongly from the Great Recession, and highly skilled individuals are prospering. But middle and working-class citizens are struggling, as are small businesses. We argue that such a divergence is unsustainable, explore its root causes, and examine actions that might mitigate it. We ask in particular, how can we create a U.S. economy in which firms both thrive in global competition and lift the living standards of the average American?

KEYWORDS

Competition; Economy; Financial Crisis; United States

CITATION

Porter, Michael E., and Jan Rivkin. "An Economy Doing Half Its Job: Findings of Harvard Business School's 2013–14 Survey on U.S. Competitiveness." Report, Harvard Business School, September 2014. (With contributions from Joseph B. Fuller, Allen S. Grossman, Rosabeth Moss Kanter, and Kevin W. Sharer.)

READ NOW

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Michael E. Porter

→ More Publications

Jan W. Rivkin

Strategy

→ More Publications

MORE FROM THE AUTHORS

JULY 2024 FACULTY RESEARCH

COMPETITIVE ADVANTAGE

By: Jan Rivkin

JUNE 2024 FACULTY RESEARCH

INTRODUCTION TO THE RC STRATEGY COURSE, FALL 2024

By: Ramon Casadesus-Masanell, Ashish Nanda and Jan W. Rivkin

JANUARY 2024 FACULTY RESEARCH

MAKING STRATEGIC CHOICES

By: Jan W. Rivkin