Notes

¹ The Nikkei 225 Index contains about twofold fewer stocks than the S&P 500, which makes the detection of a large number (at least 20 per month/sequence) of cointegrated pairs, at a 5% rate, quite difficult. For cointegration only, the pre-selection is based on a 20% filter so that the population after this preliminary step remains large enough.

² The Japanese factors reported in this library are in dollars and not in yen.

³ These time series end in March 2013. Regressions are thus computed between July 2003 and March 2013 (117 points versus 120 points with U.S. data),
