Abstract

This paper analyses the development of management buy-outs and similar transactions as an organisational innovation in the UK. Their development is situated in the context of the historical development of organisations which has previously emphasised shifts from family capitalism to managerial capitalism and in the context of deregulation and its implications. The paper identifies five periods of development, pre-1980, 1980-84, 1985-89, 1990-94 and 1995 onwards, and shows how the prevalent forms of buy-out have changed over time.
