Abstract

This article assesses the 'old' and 'new' political economy of hedge fund regulation in the EU, explaining why the EU has decided to regulate hedge fund managers in the aftermath of the global financial crisis. A Franco-German alliance, with the support of Italy, other Mediterranean countries and some quarters of the European Parliament, has

Acknowledgements

I wish to thank the European Research Council for the financial support provided for this research (Grant 204398 FINGOVEU) and the policy-makers who made themselves available for interviews. I also wish to thank the participants to the UACES conference in Angers in September 2009, the participants to the conference 'The European Union and the Financial Crisis', University of Edinburgh, 4 December 2009, James Buckley and two anonymous reviewers for their perceptive comments on earlier drafts of this article. Usual disclaimers apply.

The paper was completed and revised while the author was visiting fellow at the Robert Schuman Centre for Advanced Studies, European University Institute, Florence and at the Max Planck Institute for the Study of Societies, Cologne.

Notes

- 1. In examining the AIFM draft directive, the focus will be on its implications for hedge funds and fund managers, not for managers of private equities funds and real estate funds, which are also covered by the directive.
- 2. The literature on varieties of capitalism in Europe is extensive; for a comprehensive analysis, see Schmidt (2002), Hall and Soskice (2001), and Hancké et al. (2007).
- 3. I wish to thank one of the anonymous reviewers for pointing this out to me.
- 4. Previously, in July 2005, the then-Chancellor of Germany, Gerhard Schröder (Social Democrat) had pressed for tighter controls on hedge funds at the G7 Summit in Britain, where it was blocked as Schröder himself revealed in 'Wall Street and London' (The

- 7. This expression was used very frequently in the policy documents produced by the British Treasury, the FSA and the Bank of England.
- 8. I wish to thank one of the anonymous reviewers for pointing this out.
