

Japanese Studies >

Volume 26, 2006 - Issue 2

1,009 | 8

Views

| 0

CrossRef citations to date

| Altmetric

Original Articles

Gendering the Japanese political system: The gender-specific pattern of political activity and women's political participation

Hiroko Takeda

Pages 185-198 | Published online: 23 Jan 2007

Cite this article <https://doi.org/10.1080/10371390600883594>

Sample our Area Studies
Journals

>> Sign in here to start your access to the latest two volumes for 14 days

Full Article

Figures & data

References

Citations

Metrics

Reprints & Permissions

Read this article

Share

Abstract

In the Japanese political arena, gender equality remains elusive. To explore the reasons for that inequality, this paper analyses the gender-specific pattern of political activity in Japan in the post-war period. Building on analyses of feminist theorists, it examines three case studies before proceeding to a discussion of the issue of women's political participation in Japan. It concludes with a consideration of the double-edged nature of gender-specific political strategies which both empower and constrain the political struggles of Japanese women.

Acknowledgements

The author would like to thank Glenn Hook, Tim Kelly and June McCready for their comments on earlier drafts of this paper; two anonymous reviewers for their invaluable comments; and the Japan Foundation Endowment Committee for research grants which enabled the collection of material relating to case studies one and three.

Notes

¹ UNDP, Human Development Report 2004.

² Norris and Inglehart, 'Cultural Barriers to Women's Leadership', 7.

³ To name but a few, Kubo and Gelb, 'Obstacles and opportunities: women and political participation in Japan'; Christensen, 'The impact of electoral rules in Japan'; Martin, 'Alienated, independent and female: lessons from the Japanese electorate'; Pharr, Political Women in Japan.

⁴ Two examples among many are Sievers, Flowers in Salt, and Mackie, Creating Socialist Women in Japan.

⁵ Young, 'Impartiality and the civic public'.

⁶ The typical example of this kind of work is Lister's Citizenship: Feminist Perspectives.

⁷ For example, the discussion by Young in Justice and the Politics of Difference and Inclusion and Democracy.

⁸ In Japan, the idea of the 'mainstreaming of gender' was incorporated into the policy-making process through the promulgation of the Basic Law for a Gender-Equal Society in 1999.

⁹ Young, Inclusion and Democracy, and Phillips, The Politics of Presence.

¹⁰ Young, Inclusion and Democracy, 90.

¹¹ Lewis, 'Model of equality for women'.

¹² Folbre, The Invisible Heart, 10.

¹³ A number of researchers have observed the impact of the doubling in the number of female MPs in Britain over time, and have published their research outcomes in such journals as Parliamentary Affairs and the British Journal of Politics and International Relations. For example, see Lovenduski and Norris, 'Westminster women', and Childs, 'Having the target'.

¹⁴ Equal Employment Opportunity Committee v Sears, Roebuck and Company. See e.g. Milkman, 'Women's history and the Sears case'.

¹⁵ Gilligan, In a Difference Voice.

¹⁶ Randall, 'Gender and power'.

¹⁷ Scott, 'Deconstructing equality-versus-difference'; Bacchi, Same Difference.

¹⁸ For Phillips's account on the equality/difference dilemma issue, see Phillips, 'Universal presentations in political thought'.

¹⁹ On the dissociation of the 'politics of recognition' from redistributive politics, see Fraser, Justice Interruptus, in particular, 13–16.

²⁰ Lister, 'The dilemmas of pendulum politics'.

²¹ For example, see Okano, Shiteizunshippu no seijigaku; Tamura, 'Seijigaku to jendā'.

²² Yokoyama, Sengo nihon no josei seisaku.

²³ Mackie, 'Dimensions of citizenship in modern Japan'.

²⁴ To name but a few out of many, for example, Gelb and Estevez-Abe, 'Political women in Japan'; LeBlanc, Bicycle Citizens: The Political World of the Japanese Housewife; Uno 'The death of "good wife, wise mother"?'

²⁵ As many studies have already demonstrated, women's gender roles as mother and wives have been assigned to women according to gender norms that are constructed in historically contingent political, economic and social settings. For example, see Uno 'The death of "good wife, wise mother"?' ; Koyama, Katei no seisei to josei no kokuminka. I have also extensively discussed this issue in Takeda, The Political Economy of Reproduction in Japan, but it is beyond the focus of this paper.

²⁶ According to Fujime, there were certainly grass-roots activities by midwives responding to this situation and introducing birth control techniques to women living in rural communities. Fujime, Sei no rekishigaku.

²⁷ Besides autobiographies by Katō, for example, see Hopper, New Women of Japan.

²⁸ It is misleading to say that birth control was completely at odds with the governmental pro-natal policy. I have discussed this at length in Takeda, The Political Economy of Reproduction in Japan, 59–66.

²⁹ Kitaoka, Waga omoide no ki, 278.

³⁰ The quote is from the eulogy given by Fukuda Yasuo, son of Fukuda Takeo and then Chief Cabinet Secretary to the Koizumi cabinet. Fukuda, ‘Chōji’.

³¹ For her explanation, see Katō, Futatsu no bunka no hazama kara; Katō, Katō Shizue: aru josei seijika no hansei; Ashino, ‘Ripurodakuteibu herusu/raitsu no kiso o kizuita hito’.

³² On the New Life Movement, see Garon, Molding Japanese Minds; Takeda, The Political Economy of Reproduction in Japan, Chapter 5. Tsunematsu has detailed activities of local organizations of the New Life Movement, though she does not discuss the functions and implications of the movement to the then national political economy due to the scope of the discussion. See Tsunematsu, ‘Gender power under female leadership’.

³³ By discussing the work of Hiratsuka Raichō, Furukubo has pointed out that the emphasis on motherhood tends towards eugenics. Furukubo, ‘Raichō no “bosei-shugi” o yomu’. For the New Life Movement and concepts of eugenics, see Takeda, The Political Economy of Reproduction in Japan, 134–135.

³⁴ Tsuge et al., ‘Furoku: yūsei hogo hō omeguru saikin no dōkō’. Also, Norgren, Abortion before Birth Control.

³⁵ Kansha, Mada maniaunonara. This book has been translated into English (Kansha, Is it too Late?) but this quote is my own translation. Doden's translation simplifies the remarks on maternal instinct by omitting one sentence.

³⁶ Kansha, Is it too Late? Publisher's preface.

³⁷ The rise of the Mother's Convention movement in Japan was triggered by the thermonuclear test in the Pacific Ocean in 1954 in which Japanese fishermen were exposed to a high level of radioactivity.

³⁸ Kanō, 'Han-genpatsu undō no nakano bosei', 185.

³⁹ Tsutsumi Aiko, 'Myūtanto no kigu'.

⁴⁰ Shiota, 'Gendai feminizumu to nihon no shakai seisaku', 31.

⁴¹ Information on the case of the water protection movement in Ōno is based on research on 'governance through the family' funded by the Japan Foundation Endowment Committee. See Takeda, 'Governance through the family'.

⁴² Fukuiken Ōno no Mizu o Kangaeru Kai, Yomigaere Inochi no Mizu, 10-11.

⁴³ Fukuiken Ōno no Mizu o Kangaeru Kai, Yomigaere Inochi no Mizu.

⁴⁴ Takeda, 'Governance through the family'.

⁴⁵ For example, the Shufuren (the Housewives' Confederation), mothers' conventions, post-war peace movements, a residents' movement in Zushi against the construction of US military facilities, the Seikatsu Club cooperative and the Seikatsusha net. These political movements/activities are discussed in the literature mentioned in footnote 24. Also, see Mackie, Feminism in Modern Japan.

⁴⁶ For definition of gender, see Delphy, 'Rethinking sex and gender', 3; Kimmel, The Gendered Society, 1.

⁴⁷ It is noteworthy that the sexual division of labour in political activity deprives men of opportunities to act politically. Examining a civil movement in Machi, Niigata, that was opposed to the construction of an industrial waste plant, LeBlanc argues that non-elite men have also been excluded from the local political arena due to their masculine gender. In contrast to women who could exploit their gender role as mothers and wives to successfully impact on the local assembly, non-elite men were hindered from running for local election due to their role as bread-winners, and hence, LeBlanc maintains, the masculine gender is not an automatic source of political power. See LeBlanc, 'Why women are representing men in a Japanese town assembly'.

⁴⁸ Takeda, The Political Economy of Reproduction, 193-196.

⁵² Hasegawa, 'Seiji shakai to jendā', 74.

⁴⁹ Skocpol, Protecting Soldiers and Mothers.

⁵⁰ Bock and Thane, Maternity and Gender Policies; Koven and Michel (eds), Mothers of a New World; Folbre, The Invisible Heart: Economics and Family Values.

⁵¹ Bock and Thane, Maternity and Gender Policies, 7.

⁵³ Ibid., 82.

⁵⁴ LeBlanc, Bicycle Citizens, 197.

⁵⁵ Ibid., 202.

⁵⁶ Fraser, Justice Interruptus; also Fraser and Honneth, Redistribution or Recognition?

Related research

People also read

Recommended articles

Cited by 8

Information for

Authors

R&D professionals

Editors

Librarians

Societies

Opportunities

Reprints and e-prints

Advertising solutions

Accelerated publication

Corporate access solutions

Open access

Overview

Open journals

Open Select

Dove Medical Press

F1000Research

Help and information

Help and contact

Newsroom

All journals

Books

Keep up to date

Register to receive personalised research and resources
by email

 Sign me up

Copyright © 2026 Informa UK Limited Privacy policy Cookies Terms & conditions

Accessibility

Registered in England & Wales No. 01072954
5 Howick Place | London | SW1P 1WG