ABSTRACT

Soft law promulgated by transnational networks is one of the hallmarks of governance in global finance. Standard accounts alternatively view such governance as a fast and flexible solution to transnational problems or weakly institutionalized club standards epiphenomenal to great power interests. We argue that dominant perspectives' view of soft law is misguided, as soft law in global finance cannot be understood in isolation from domestic law. Viewing soft law through the prism of multilevel governance highlights the role European integration in particular plays in 'hardening' soft law provisions, thereby shaping the global diffusion of such standards. As soft law becomes embedded in domestic law, its certainty and durability are enhanced while at the same time its flexibility is reduced. Case studies of the diffusion of international accounting standards and close-out netting rules for over-the-counter derivatives provide empirical support for the importance of domestic law in the global diffusion of soft law.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

We would like to thank the editors, as well as two anonymous reviewers, who made invaluable suggestions. In addition, we thank participants at the conference on Europe and Global Finance organized by Daniel Mügge at the University of Amsterdam, 14–15 February 2013. In addition, we received very useful feedback from Burkard Eberlein, Calvin Huntington, Rahul Kaul, Stefano Pagliari, Tony Porter, Elliot Posner, Lucia Quaglia, Eleni Tsingou, Kevin Young, David Zaring and Jonathan Zeitlin.

Notes

1 In terms of institutionalization, we follow Ruggie (1998: 2) who focuses on predictability of behavior structured in large part by organizational routines. He identifies international organizations with their bureaucratic capacities as the key mechanism for institutionalization internationally. Given the non-treaty-based nature of soft law, many observers have described them as thinly institutionalized or network-based. See, for example, Zaring (2004).
