Abstract

The Eurozone crisis brought the European Economic and Monetary Union (EMU) to the brink of collapse; the prevention of this required the use of unconventional measures by the European Central Bank (ECB), the construction of new financial regulatory institutions, and an amendment of EMU laws. These changes culminated in the establishment of a banking union, though not a complete one. This article has two aims. First, it seeks to evaluate to what extent the European crisis management strategy led to a fundamental change in the EMU institutional design. Second, it seeks to identify the key drivers of change, with a focus on the interaction between ECB, the Commission, and Germany.

This article is based on research conducted during my stay at the KFG ‘The Transformative Power of Europe’ at the Freie Universität, Berlin, directed by Prof. Tanja Börzel and Prof. Thomas Risse. An earlier version of the paper was presented at the Research Seminar of the KFG and I would like to thank Prof. Fritz Scharpf for his valuable comments. I also thank Dr Ali Arbia, Dr Benjamin Braun, and Dr Doris Wydra, for reading and commenting on earlier versions.
