

Q

1,408 | 52 | 1 | Altmetric | Articles

Examining how aspects of vocational privilege relate to living a calling

Ryan D. Duffy , Kelsey L. Autin & Richard P. Douglass

Pages 416-427 | Received 25 Jun 2015, Accepted 07 Sep 2015, Published online: 15 Oct 2015

Abstract

Full Article

Reprints & Permissions

The current study examined how aspects of vocational privilege directly – and indirectly via work meaning and career commitment – related to living a calling. With an economically diverse sample of 361 employed adults, both social class and work volition were found to moderately to strongly correlate with work meaning, career commitment, and living a calling. We used a structural equation model and found career commitment and work meaning to significantly predict living a calling and fully mediate the link between work volition and living a calling. Additionally, social class related to work meaning and career commitment via work volition. Findings suggest that the links between social class, work volition, and living a calling may be explained by individuals working in jobs they are committed to and that are meaningful, and that work volition may represent the gateway from social class to the experience of fulfilling work. Implications for practice are discussed.

Keywords:

Related research 1

Information for

Authors

R&D professionals

Editors

Librarians

Societies

Opportunities

Reprints and e-prints

Advertising solutions

Accelerated publication

Corporate access solutions

Open access

Overview

Open journals

Open Select

Dove Medical Press

F1000Research

Help and information

Help and contact

Newsroom

All journals

Books

Keep up to date

Register to receive personalised research and resources by email

Sign me up

Accessibility

Copyright © 2025 Informa UK Limited Privacy policy Cookies Terms & conditions

Registered in England & Wales No. 01072954 5 Howick Place | London | SW1P 1WG