Abstract

The Gas Exporting Countries Forum (GECF) is a young international organization which is expected to acquire a great deal of influence on the gas market. It is often compared to OPEC. The kind of relationship between the forum and the world gas market is still unclear. This new organization is expected to play a significant role in the gas market. We have some concerns about the balance of power between the forum and the world gas market. This new organization is expected to play a significant role in the gas market. We have some concerns about the balance of power between the forum and the world gas market.
