

Journal of Contemporary African Studies >
Volume 1, 1981 - Issue 1

14 Views | 3 CrossRef citations to date | 0 Altmetric

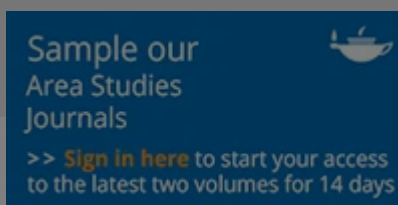

Original Articles

Financing socio-economic development in the black homelands of South Africa

Wolfgang H. Thomas

Pages 141-165 | Published online: 21 Sep 2007

“ Cite this article <https://doi.org/10.1080/02589008108729378>

“ Citations

Metrics

Reprints & Permissions

Read this article

We Care About Your Privacy

We and our 845 partners store and/or access information on a device, such as unique IDs in cookies to process personal data. You may accept or manage your choices by clicking below, including your right to object where legitimate interest is used, or at any time in the privacy policy page. These choices will be signaled to our partners and will not affect browsing data. Privacy Policy

We and our partners process data to provide:

Use precise geolocation data. Actively scan device characteristics for identification. Store and/or access information on a device. Personalised advertising and content, advertising and content measurement, audience research and services development.

List of Partners (vendors)

I Accept

Essential Only

Show Purpose

Financing Socio-Economic Development in the Black Homelands of South Africa

WOLFGANG H. THOMAS

IN the economic and political debate about South Africa's homelands, fiscal and financial matters have received remarkably little attention. There has been some technical discussion of the methods and procedures involved in regional budgeting and of the problems of fiscal discipline and the actual disbursement procedures of the two South African government departments concerned (those of Co-operation and Development for the self-governing homelands, and Foreign Affairs for the independent homelands). Minimal attention, however, has been paid to the principles underlying the mobilisation and allocation of funds for these development regions. The narrowness of the debate may be due in part to the somewhat schizophrenic attitude taken by many development experts towards these evolving states: those who accept their independent status seem more concerned with details of implementation than with a critical evaluation of long-term trends; those who dispute this status usually refrain from any debate of the practical problems of implementation. A similar vacuum is encountered in the related field of the socio-economic development of South Africa's coloured and Asian populations. Of the numerous articles about the President's Council, the constellation of states, or the gradual integration of coloureds, Asians and whites, few are concerned explicitly with the financial and fiscal dimension, and neither these nor the more general contributions on South Africa's economic system go very far in a direction where discussion is urgently required.

This contribution should be regarded as no more than a small step into a relatively barren landscape; at best it may help stimulate further debate which should include black and non-black academics and politicians. The emphasis in this article is placed on conceptual and politico-economic aspects rather than on statistical or institutional details.

Log in

> Access

Log in

> Log in

Restore

> Restore content access for purchases made as guest

PDF download + Online access

- 48 hours access to article PDF & online version
- Article PDF can be downloaded
- Article PDF can be printed

USD 53.00

Add to cart

Issue Purchase

- 30 days online access to complete issue
- Article PDFs can be downloaded
- Article PDFs can be printed

USD 674.00

Add to cart

* Local tax will be added as applicable

Related Research

People also read

Recommended articles

Cited by 3

X

Information for

Authors

R&D professionals

Editors

Librarians

Societies

Opportunities

Reprints and e-prints

Advertising solutions

Accelerated publication

Corporate access solutions

Open access

Overview

Open journals

Open Select

Dove Medical Press

F1000Research

Help and information

Help and contact

Newsroom

All journals

Books

Keep up to date

Register to receive personalised research and resources by email

Sign me up

Copyright © 2024 Informa UK Limited Privacy policy Cookies Terms & conditions

Taylor & Francis Group
an informa business

Accessibility

Registered
5 Howick Place

